On Saturday, September 26, 2009, the Carnegie Center for Art and History in New Albany, Indiana will participate in the fifth annual Museum Day, presented by Smithsonian magazine. A celebration of culture, learning and the dissemination of knowledge, Smithsonian's Museum Day reflects the spirit of the magazine and emulates the free-admission policy of the Smithsonian Institution's Washington, DC-based properties.

Last year, upwards of 200,000 people attended Museum Day, with all 50 states plus Puerto Rico represented by over 900 participating museums, including 84 Smithsonian affiliate museums. This year, the magazine expects to attract over 1,000 museums. "The Carnegie Center for Art and History is proud to participate in Museum Day 2009 in association with the venerable museums of the Smithsonian Institution," said Laura Wilkins, Director of Marketing and Outreach at the Center. "Like the Smithsonian museums, the Carnegie Center offers free admission and programs year-round, and we look forward to recognizing Museum Day 2009 with our visitors."

On Museum Day, September 26, visitors to the Carnegie Center can view the exhibit "Stripes," an international hooked rug exhibition featuring the fiber art of 52 artists from the United States and Japan. Each design incorporates stripes in a unique manner. Visitors can also view the Center's two permanent history exhibits. Grandpa Makes a Scene: The Yenawine Dioramas is a favorite among visitors young and old alike. The award-winning, multimedia exhibit Ordinary People, Extraordinary Courage: Men and Women of the Underground Railroad invites visitors to explore the people and places of antebellum New Albany and Louisville, Kentucky.

Founded in 1970 with the launch of Smithsonian magazine, Smithsonian Media—comprising Smithsonian magazine, Air & Space, goSmithsonian, Smithsonian Publishing Digital Network, Smithsonian Books and advertising for Smithsonian Channel—allows the intellectually curious to indulge and engage their passions for history, the arts, science, the natural world, culture and travel. Smithsonian Media's flagship publication, Smithsonian magazine, has a circulation of more than two million. This multimedia network is also affiliated with the world's most visited museum and research complexes at the Smithsonian Institution.
