

Christian concert in New Albany at Coffee Crossing Saturday

Written by Administrator

Thursday, 21 January 2010 00:00 - Last Updated Thursday, 21 January 2010 12:36

Coffee Crossing on Charlestown Road in New Albany will host a Christian music show on Saturday from 8-11 p.m.

The group performing will be Brady Enders and The Delicate.

Enders has been singing all his life, but he picked up the guitar six years and has been playing music ever since.

He said his love for music started at an early age while he and his brother went to sleep to the sound of their father singing and softly strumming the strings.

"Each string presented a peaceful melancholy," he said.

When they weren't singing Enders' father would play Enya, as well as others.

"I began to truly envelop myself in my music and bring only truth, with great conviction," Enders said.

He went on to study musical composition at Indiana University Southeast and he has composed more than 100 songs between the ages of 16-20.

"I write and record all of my own music, and love to glorify God in every sentence and phrase before me," Enders said.

Admission to Saturday's show is free. Those attending are encouraged to arrive early as seating is limited.