North Harrison interim Supt. Randy Barrett informed the Board of School Trustees Thursday night that with Federal Stimulus Funds, an interest free loan could be possible, if the administration applies for the funds. The funds for this type of loan are controlled by the states, and the Indiana Dept. of Education would be the organization giving the loan out.

Barrett stressed the interest free aspect of the loan to the members of the North Harrison Board of School Trustees.

“This bond is unique, in that there is no interest (charged),” said Barrett.

The payback time would be 15 to 16 years, and only the amount of the original loan would need to be paid back, according to Barrett.

In another matter regarding finances, Barrett cautioned that the North Harrison Community School Corporation lost $107 million in assessed evaluation. The amount of money raised by the school corporation in tax levies will actually be higher, due to the tax rates being higher.

Before the board acted on any matters they had to approve, they heard a presentation from 2009 North Harrison High School graduate Maggie Cassidy. Cassidy is presently studying chemical engineering at Purdue University. She received won a scholarship from the school board towards her educational expenses.
