? AGNES IRENE SPENCER CRECELIUS, 86, English, died Sunday, August 2 at Autumn Woods Health Campus in New Albany.

She was a homemaker but better known as the "preacher's wife" as she served beside her husband Robert in several EUB and United Methodist Churches in Indiana. Upon his retirement, the two moved to English and she helped to raise their grandchildren. When Robert passed away, she moved to assisted living in Clarksville. When her eyesight started failing, she moved into the home of her son, Patrick and his wife, Judy, who cared for her. Music was always a part of her life as she sang in the Fairbanks High School and Frankfort Pilgrim College choirs. She sang accompaniment with Robert as he played guitar. In the last few years of her life, she would play her favorite hymns by ear on a keyboard.

She was preceded in death by her parents, her husband, Robert Manuel Crecelius and two sisters, Margaret Cook and Bertha Hensley.

Survivors include two sons, Patrick Crecelius of Edwardsville and Robert E. Crecelius of English; two brothers, Merrill Spencer of Frankfort and Willis Spencer of Robards, Kentucky;

two sisters, Rebecca Ficklin of Clarksville, Tennessee and Grace Dupin of Kernersville, North Carolina; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.
