After his release from the hospital, Mullis was placed into custody and taken to the Washington County Jail on Thursday, December 27.

According to the Washington County Clerk's office, charges pending against him include operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated and causing death, a Class B felony; operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated (OVI) with prior conviction, a Class D felony; OVI as a Class A misdemeanor; reckless homicide, a Class C felony; and one count each of criminal recklessness and false informing, both Class A misdemeanors.

All of these charges were to be filed on Friday morning, December 28, in Washington Superior Court. Mullis was expected to appear for an initial court hearing and enter a plea that day as well.

Mullis is now under a 15-day hold order. Washington County Prosecutor Dustin Houchin requested the petition for detention and/or greater-than-standard bond and received approval of same by the Court on Thursday, December 27. Mullis was reportedly on probation in connection with a criminal case in Monroe County at the time of the fatal accident.

The man's bond has been set at $100,000 corporate surety or full cash.
