

Tornado sirens filled the air in the days leading up to Christmas.

The sirens were followed by flash floods in most flood prone areas in southern Indiana.

When most people were dreaming and singing about a white Christmas, were experiencing severe storms, gusty winds, tornado warnings, and excessive amounts of rain that has caused flooding in the local area, causing ponding of water in roadways and many roads being closed to high waters this past holiday week.