The Clark County Drug Treatment Court Program will sponsor a food drive/Cornhole/Corn Toss tournament November 20 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the front lawn of the Clark County Building, 501 East Court Avenue in Jeffersonville.

This Food Drive will be the first sponsored by the treatment program. The Drug Treatment Court wants to increase public awareness and give back to the community.

Participants are asked to donate non-perishable items which will be given to the area food bank.

For each item donated, the individual will receive four tosses. Scores will be kept as they are in a traditional Cornhole/Corn Toss game (a corn bag in the hole has a value of three points and a corn bag on the corn-hole platform is in-the-count and is worth one point).

The person with the most points at the end of the day will win a prize. (Prize still to be determined)

The more you donate, the more points you can score and the better your chance of winning!

The Clark County Drug Treatment Court Program was established by Judge Cecile Blau in 2002, as a division of Clark County Superior Court No.2 and probation services. The program is only one of 25 Adult Drug Treatment Courts in the state and certified directly by the Indiana Supreme Court. The Drug Treatment Court has provided rehabilitative services to more than 100 substance abuse offenders while their cases remain pending in Superior Court.

If anyone is interested in being a volunteer or donating a prize to be awarded on points, please contact the court at 812-285-6333. You may also ask for more information about the Advisory Board that meets quarterly.
