Join others across the world on June 14 and donate blood through the American Red Cross on World Blood Donor Day. Blood is a perishable product that must be constantly replenished by generous volunteer blood donors.

One out of every 10 people admitted to the hospital needs blood. By becoming a blood donor, or by making regular donations, you are making a vital contribution to modern healthcare.

“Most people think that blood is used mainly for victims of car accidents and other trauma patients,” said, Lori Medley, Director of Donor Recruitment of the American Red Cross River Valley Region. “But, blood is used for so many other patients. It’s used for the treatment of cancer patients, people with blood disorders, premature babies and transplant recipients.”

When you donate blood through the Red Cross, you help provide the gift of life for patients in serious medical need. Make an appointment to donate blood today and you can change a life, starting with your own.
